SENILITY'S SLIDING SCALE.

The American Physical Education Association, made up of college, school and Y. M. C. A. gymnasium directors and other exponents of physical culture, started a three day talkfest at Teachers College vesterday. Prof. Franz Boas of the department of anthropology and physiological psychology at Columbia, delivered an address on the "Significance of Epochs in Growth and Development."

Prof. Boas spread out a table of statistics, prepared by himself and others from the examination of thousands of cases, regarding growth of human beings. His statistics showed that the first appearances of senility came at a mean age of 44.5 years, with deviations of 5.3 years either way. The strongest symptom of decadence, the hardening of the arteries, appeared on the average at 62.5 years, with deviation all the way from 49.3 to 75.7 years longer to cut their wisdom teeth than boys. The changes in these things were caused by differences in environment, social conditions and heredity.

The full table, figured in terms of years, showed the following facts regarding human development:

The meeting was opened by an address from Dr. Luther Halsey Gulick, director of physical training in the New York pubc schools, once president of the association. The morning was devoted to a consideration of the usefulness of dancing in sideration of the usefulness of dancing in physical training of boys and girls. Miss Caroline Crawford of Teachers College advocated letting little children dance in the gymnasium.

"Let them do the kind of dancing that they like best." said Miss Crawford. "and it will probably be found to be the kind that is performed to the accompaniment of Indian tunes. Let them do Indian war dances. Give the tots a chance to get their exercise in the way that they like best and it will be found to be the most beneficial to them."

In the afternoon Dr. George L. Meylan, In the afternoon Dr. George L. Meylan, Columbia's physical director, spoke about marks for proficiency in physical education. "Vitality is much more desirable than strength," said Dr. Meylan. "Vitality and endurance are correlated and endurance tests are the things that we are trying to make. No satisfactory vitality test has been found."

Dr. Dudley Allen Sargent, director of the Hemenway Gymnasium at Harvard, eaid:

The medical examination of athletes The medical examination of athletes tells nothing positive. It merely certifies that a man has no physical defects which debar him. It does not certify that he can bear the strain of athletics. The first system of strength tests was all right, but as soon as the colleges began to compete to see which had the strongest men the tests began to be juggled. Men practised with the machinery and the test became a mere matter of knack. That's why the intercollegiate strength test competition for the fifty strongest men from each college was dropped.

"Some persons say that a man who does these tests is likely to become 'muscle bound.' That phrase is merely a cloak for ignorance. Not more than one man in every 10,000 is muscle bound. In more than thirty years I have met only two men who were."

than thirty years I have met only two men who were."

Dr. Gulick said that excessive strength and excessive heart action were the things that the old system of strength tests required. That was one reason why the old marking system was a failure in the public schools. "The normal is the desirable thing." said he. "In the schools we assign 20 points for strength and endurance, 30 for applied hygiene and health and 50 for control of the body and muscles."

control of the body and muscles."

Emanuel Haug of the De Witt Clinton High School told as a sort of supplemental story how the examinations for personal hygiene were made.

"The children seemed at first to think that anything was good enough for school,"

d he. "About three years ago we started A boy would come in for his physical amination. We turned down his coat llar and sent him home for a clean collar collar and sent him home for a clean collar if he needed it. Then we got them to clean their shoes, and, finally, got them to taking baths regularly. The system was dropped for a while, but resumed again only a few weeks ago. I had one boy who came in whom I told to go get a bath. He came back again without it. The third time, I took him down in the cellar after school, and had him strip in the basement. Then I turned the hose on him. There was no trouble after that."

While this meeting was being held in one room, another branch gathered to consider therapeutic gymnastics. Dr. H. V. Barclay of New York said that ataxis reduced the body to a condition of weakness like that of

TO RESTORE JUMEL MANSION. The B. A. R. to Begin Turning Back |the Hands of Time at Once.

At a meeting of the Washington Heights Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution, held last Friday, it was decided to begin at once the work of restoring the Jumel Mansion, which has been given in trust to the chapter by the city with the understanding that the onetime headquarters of Washington shall be used as a museum of historical relies. The chapter intends to remove all traces of modern occupancy of the house, tearing out gas logs and gas fixtures and restoring the great fireplaces to their former chilly grandeur. In order that it be not too chilly, the house will be heated with steam, but so cunningly will the pipes be laid that no visitor will guess the reason for a warmth unknown to his forefathers. In the matter of lights there will be no deception and the tallow dip will once more come to its own.

The rooms of the old house are to be furnished by the various chapters of the Daughters. Each room will be furnished in a style befitting the days of '76 and as far as possible the furniture will have a historical interest of its own. The fences surrounding the property will be done away with and an entrance gate of stone and iron similar to those at Mount Vernon will be erected.

The ancient Egyptian cypresses, said to have been sent over by Napoleon Bonaparte, most of which are now standing on land which no longer belongs to the Jumei property, are to be transplanted to locations near the house. One Daughter said of this: "Poor things! I don't believe they'll stand it, but goodness knows they can't look worse than they do."

The plans include a Colonial garden with sun dials and statues, but the extent to which this will be carried depends largely of lights there will be no deception and the

The Daughters are backed in their efforts at restoration by the Sons of the American Revolution and the Washington Headquarters Association, which includes the Mary Washington, the Martha Washington and the Manhattan chapters of the D. TOOK TWO BEER PLEDGE.

Volk of Hoboken Solemnly Swears Off After Trying to Kill Himself.

Stephen Volk, a gatekeeper at Castle Point, Hoboken, who inhaled gas through a rub-ber tube in the cellar of Palmer Campbell's house, at 60 Eighth street, Hoboken, was arraigned in the Recorder's court yesterday for violating the Jersey anti-suicide law. Richard Stevens, probation officer of Hudson county, explained that Volk's attempt to destroy himself was due to a fondness for intoxicating drink.

"Will you take the pledge?" asked Re-corder Stanton. "If you will I'll let you go."
"With the greatest of pleasure," replied

Volk. "I made up my mind while I was in the hospital to swear off as soon as I got out." Volk seized the Bible with a trembling hand and the Recorder read the pledge to

"Do you promise to abstain forever from the use of all intoxicants, wines, liquors, beer—"

"Hold on," said Volk. "Can't you leave the beerout. I don't see how I can get along without it. I'm a German, you know."

"How many do you think you need each day?" inquired the Magistrate.

"Well, one might do, but two would be much better."

"I'll limit you to two beers a day and no more."

"Please put it in the pledge, Judge, and I'll take it."

The Recorder revised the oath to please him, inserting the words "two beers per day," and Volk solemnly "swore off." Then he hurried out and drank the day's limit.

WASN'T MRS. MAPES AFTER ALL, Woman Who Ordered Goods in Her Name Accused of Shoplifting.

A woman who said she was Mrs. Eugene A. Mapes of 59 West Fighty-ninth street went into a Sixth avenue dry goods store yesterday afternoon and bought stuff costing $40.45, charging it to the account of Mrs. Mapes.

The store detective, John F. Larkin, says he saw her take $13 worth of stuff without the formality of having it charged. He stopped her at the door and asked her to go to the office, telling her he knew she was not Mrs. Mapes. He pointed out that the initial on her bag was P. The woman said that then she was authorized to buy for Mrs. Mapes, a statethorized to buy for Mrs. Mapes, a statement presently denied over the telephone by Mrs. Mapes.

At the Tenderloin police station the woman described herself as Mrs. Mary Smith, 25 years old, of 50 Clinton avenue (no such number), Brooklyn, but afterward said she was Mrs. Prichard of 374 Halsey street, Brooklyn, the wife of a fish dealer at 785 Gates avenue. She was charged with larceny and with obtaining money under false pretences.

FRANK MOSS PRAISES POLICE.

PITIES NICE COMMISSIONER FROM SOME OTHER CITY.

Odd Raps at Societies, Wise Men and Fussy Legislation in Cooper Union Talk --Appeal to People's Sober Sense and Conscience-Too Many Thieves Still.

Frank Moss, formerly a Police Commissioner, talked about the Police Department, its past, present and probable future, to a good sized audience in Cooper Union last night. Aside from one or two interruptions made by an overlubricated listener, there was nothing but applause for the speaker.

The past of the department, Mr. Moss said, was pretty bad, and he drew illustrations from his own experiences. By them he tried to show that a well regulated collusion existed between criminals and cops in the days gone by.

"A police officer is primarily a peace officer," said Mr. Moss. "His by siness is to protect life and property and a police force is well organized when this protection is given. Then, too, he is expected to give information to anybody who desires it. I don't mean that a police officer should be obliged to lose his self respect; but he is paid to be the guardian of peace and to give directions."

Mr. Moss then told a little story illustrating the extreme politeness practised by London policemen, and how patrolmen there are allowed to talk with their friends while on beat or to take a sixpence if it is offered them.

"Here a policeman would be insulted if you offered him a sixpence," added the speaker, "because it is so small."

Mr. Moss told how much more efficient the police forces of Continental cities seemed to him to be, because they were under national control. He did not advise such control in New York, because conditions were different in this country, he said.

control in New York, because conditions were different in this country, he said. He went on:

"There is great improvement in the department itself and in the city and among the people. I believe if we set up reasonable standards we will soon get to be the best city in the world. And this is because the public have known, and are finding out more every day, about the department.

"In earlier days a man risked his property and his life if he stood up for the right. Now there are hundreds and thousands who are enlightened as to the conditions, and who are patriotic to the last drop of blood. This city is to be saved, not by laws or societies or wise men, but by the good, sober sense and judgment and conscience of the common people."

The speaker then paid high tributes to the patrolmen. He said that most of the trouble was caused through the contivance of higher officials. Speaking of the requirements of a Commissioner for New York, he continued:

"It is cruelty to animals to bring a decent, nice, honorable man from some other city and put him down in that cage in Mulberry street, at the mercy of the other men who are there. He should be a man born and reared in New York."

The former Commissioner declared that the lawlessness of police forces, more than anything else, had fostered the growth of anarchy.

"The greatest problems of the police here," anything else, had fostered the growth of anarchy.

"The greatest problems of the police here," he said, "are not the excise violations, nor the gambling houses, nor disorderly places, but what we want to get at is that kind of improvement in the force that will stop burglary, robbery and footpadding. Our city is fuller of burglars and thieves than ever before. Legislation that goes fussing around doesn't accomplish anything. We should live up to the laws we have. The roundsman should be out spotting the patrolman, the sergeant should be out spotting the roundsman, and the captain should be watching the sergeant. You know how Teddy used to start out and walk from one end of the city to the other. Then, and only then, will the roundsmen come out of their holes and get busy.

"Become familiar with the police force. Know something about the men and the system, and realize how the interests of the city are locked up in the police department. Then, some day, we will have a Police Department to be proud of."
